Anthrax Cases Confirmed In Five Counties

COLLEGE STATION

Anthrax cases have been confirmed in five Texas counties by the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory at Texas A&M University.

Cases have been reported thus far in Falls, Harris, Medina, Tom Green, and Victoria Counties. Falls was the site of a major outbreak last summer.

Dr. William Sippel, executive director of the diagnostic laboratory, reminds livestock owners in these areas, and also in areas of past outbreaks, that they should have their animals vaccinated every year.

Sippel notes that he agrees with a statement by Dr. J. B. Young of the Texas Animal Health Commission asserting, "the number of cases in the state thus far is about normal."

Young, however, urges caution and recommends yearly vaccination by owners in soil where the spores are known to exist.

The disease is caused by bacterial spores that lie dormant in alkaline soil. An area that has had an outbreak will be more likely to have another in the future, he adds.

Animals with anthrax usually display blood or bloody foam escaping from body openings. Quick death usually follows. Deaths can usually be scotched within two weeks by prompt vaccination.

Cross Burns On Waco Lawn

WACO

East Waco NAACP is calling for an extensive investigation by law enforcement authorities concerning a cross burning incident in southwest Waco. The cross was found burning early Sunday morning on a front lawn. The group wants an in-depth investigation to see if the incident is an organized effort to harrass or just a prank.

Flying Couple Still Missing

HEARNE

No trace has been noted yet in the search for Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Dick of Hearne who have been missing since they left the Hearne airport on August 9, en route to Alice where they were to attend a wedding. Dick was piloting the plane, recently purchased by the couple, after taking flying lessions and finishing his solo flight. He planned to follow the highway as much as possible during the flight.

Electricity Rates To Soar

GEORGETOWN

Electricity prices, like the cost of natural gas, will probably be hiked again next month, say Georgetown city officials. LCRA has notified the city it will nearly double the fuel adjustment charge on its next electricty bill to customers like Georgetown. This means the city will probably have to add more than 60 percent of the base rate it charges into the bills local customers receive in October.

New High School Planned

BELTON

The green light was given for further planning on a new high school plant for Belton in a special session of the school board. After presentation of preliminary drawings to be used for planning of a new high school, the board discussed, but set no date, for calling a $4.5 million bond issue.

Armed Forces In Exercise

GATESVILLE

Fifteen thousand soldiers and airmen and tons of equipment went into action Thursday as Army and Air Force units staged a joint services exercise on Gatesville's doorstep--and in the skies above it. The massive exercise is dubbed Brave Shield XII, and North Fort Hood, the site of the "war" became the mythical countries of Midon and Hamilton.

Papers Under New Ownership

CALDWELL

Burleson County Publishing Co. has taken over ownership and operation of the Burleson County Citizen-Tribune and the Caldwell News in Caldwell and the Somerville Tribune in Somerville. Tommy Anderson will be publisher and managing editor. Other principals in the company are L. M. Preuss of Giddings, Franklin Kasper of Giddings, and Jim Maier of Bellville.

Council Grants Rate Hikes

THORNDALE

Thorndale city council granted rate hikes to General Telephone Co. and Lone Star Gas Co. General Telephone and the council came to a compromise rate hike that settled the long standing suit againstthe Thorndale council. The delay in the hike which resulted in the law suit saved customers on the Thorndale exchange $552.75 per month from the figure first requested by the phone company.

Wild Turkeys Released

SOMERVILLE

Some 26 wild turkeys have been released on the Koehler ranch in the Birch Creek area about five miles south of Deanville. Game management officers hope the birds can adapt to the terrain around Somerville, and will provide sport for hunters at a later date. Hunters have been asked to protect the turkeys until they are grown.

Shell Oil Exec Says Five Years Needed Before Lignite Is Moved

A Shell Oil Co. vice-president scotched rumors that a site has been chosen for its Milam County headquarters in its project to mine lignite in the county, and said that it will take a minimum of five years to start moving coal.

Shell has put together a lease block totaling some 18,000 acres, or 28 square miles in South Milam County. The area borders Alcoa owned land south of Rockdale and extends to north of Milano in a strip some 2 to 3 miles wide.

Shell has led a highly competitive leasing chase for lignite land in Milam County during the past 18 months. Other companies active in leasing locally are Dow Chemical, Phillips Petroleum, Exxon, and Texas Utilities.

Keith Doig of Houston, vice-president of mining ventures for Shell, said in a Rockdale Reporter interview last week that actual ordering of mining equipment is probably 2 1/2 to 3 years away. Construction of railroad spurs and assembly of equipment is not expected to begin for 3 1/2 years.

"It will take a minimum of five years to start moving coal," Doig said.

In the meantime, Doig said Shell wants to halt any rumors that a site has been chosen for its South Milam County headquarters, or that lignite to be mined would go abroad.

He said the lignite would be marketed in Texas, with the possible exception that a small portion could go to Louisiana.

Doig said Shell itslef will probably utilize much of the lignite at its Deer Park Refinery and Chemical Plant which is now fired with oil but is being converted to utilize coal.

All of the leased land is located in the Rockdale and Milano school districts. Shell's near 18,000-acre block represents a lignite reserve of about 150 million tons.

Tentative figures for employment in the venture is set at about 200 persons, with about 50 more if a crusher is part of the operation and if a sulphur-extraction processor is needed.

Core drilling by Shell's contracted rigs has been essentially exploratory to date, but Doig said that the next step will be detailed coring. Then come environmental studies, chemical analysis, and other planning for another 18 months to two years.

Shell officials recently hosted representatives of the Rockdale city government to lay out their plans and discuss community relations. Attending the meeting were Mayor Darral Walker, City Mgr. Ernie Moore, and City Councilman Collier Perry. They met in Houston with six Shell officials.

DPS Director Estimates 42 Deaths For Holiday

AUSTIN

State Public Safety Director Wilson E. Speir today estimated that Labor Day weekend traffic in Texas will claim 42 lives.

The holiday period extends from 6 p.m. Friday, August 29 through midnight Monday, September 1. During a comparable period last year, Texas traffic killed 51 persons.

"Traffic will be particularly heavy near recreation areas such as beaches, lakes, and campgrounds. Actually, in these situations, motorists need to be extra watchful for children playing and other pedestrians. Also, persons towing recreational vehilcles and boats should be mindful of extra stopping distances and other problems unique to trailers," Speir said.

The DPS director called on motorists to cooperate in law enforcement effort s to hold speeds down during the holiday, noting that "excessive speed is still our top accident problem."

He also urged motorists to work with officers to eliminate the serious threat posed by drunk dirvers.

In an effort to reduce the toll, Speir said extra DPS troopers will be on duty statewide. He said troopers and local officers will be especially watchful for speeding, reckless and drunk drivers.

In addition to these efforts, the Texas Department of Public Safety will also work with the news media in its "Operation Motorcide" accident awareness program.

Hiroshima Survivor Recalls Odd Cures Used By Stricken People

By Toshio Kojima

TOKYO

Reuter--Sliced cucumber, pumpkin, and powder from pulverized human skulls were among the cures tried by shocked survivors in the aftermath of the world's first atomic bomb attack 30 years ago.

This was recalled by Keiji Nakazana, who was a six-year-old when an American B-29 dropped a bomb high over Hiroshima on the sultry day of August 6, 1945.

Keiji was standing behind the school fence, which probably saved his life. A middle-aged woman nearby, he recall, turned into a red demon of firey pain.

"Somehow, the rumor spread that powdered skull would cure burns and illness caused by the new type of bomb," Nakazawa recalled in an interview here.

"I put it on my burns several times," he added.

"Other rumors said sliced cucumber and pumpkin would be effective on burned skin and flesh, so I tried those too.

"They all appeared to help. The sandy, dry bone powder felt pleasant on my burned skin and the chilly dew from the cucumber and pumpkin gave me some comfort, anyway."

Nakazawa, a short, stout, bespectacled man of 36, who now lives happily in Tokyo with his attractive wife Misayo and eight-year-old daughter, recounts the story in an anti-war comic strip now being made into a film.

The strip, called "Barefoot Gen," depicts the frightful, eerie scenes of the bombing and the miserable life of those who survived. Nakazawa lost his father, young brother, and sister in the blast.

Two elder brothers survived along with his mother, who died 10 years ago.

The comic strip, largely based on Nakazawa's experiences but containing an element of fiction, shows how survivors were often ill-treated by their unaffected countrymen, revolted by the horrible burns and fearing rumors that radiation was infectious.

Nakazawa's anti-war and anti-nuclear sentiments come through strongly, along with the bitterness felt by the Japanese towards the Americans for dropping such a weapon.

The comic depicts how he dug the skulls of his father, sister, and young brother from the debris of their home and kept them in a bucket until the remains were finally placed in a temple two years later.

Nakazaw's father, an opponent of the war, had been tortured by Japan's special political police. The book outlines the hardship of the family caused by the father's criticism of Japanese war leaders.

"Barefoot Gen" was first serialized in a weekly magazine in June, 1973. A small publishing house printed the strips in four volumes starting last May.

Nakazawa says he has received more than 800 letters and cards from young readers expressing shock at the horrors of war.

Educational and peace groups are urging that the cartoon should be shown in Japanese schools.

Shooting of the film started at ceremonies in Hiroshima on August 6, marking the 30th anniversary of the bombing.

"Barefoot Gen" is the second work by Nakazawa about the Hiroshima bombing. His first was "Kuroi Ame" (Black Rain), a series of comic strips for young readers.

He says that for years he had not wanted to think about the bomb, but the shock of his mother's death changed his mind.

Ban On Public Smoker....

More non-smokers may result from a September 1 law in Texas which calls for fines for persons smoking in a public school, elevator, enclosed theater or movie house, library, museum, hospital, or bus.

Since all the movements against smoking, younger people continue to smoke in great numbers, having given up on the drugs, unless hooked, except possibly on marijuana on college campuses.

This new law goes against the ordinary cigarette, cigar, or pipe smoker who can "fog" in a place within a few minutes of lighting up.

In England, one British medical leader is pushing legislation which would not only deter smoking like this Texas law, but would put a stigma on smoking in private, in social gatherings, and otherwise make it an "outcast" device.

People will always smoke or drink or drive fast cars or whatever, out of boredom. But greater numbers may drop the habit when it is in effect seen as a "public nusiance" and finally a social discourtesy anywhere.

Their lungs and heart will be the benefactors.

Finding The Balance...

Cameron's share of a state sales tax rebate is $9,185, almost $2,000 more than Rockdale, and a sign that again a balanced economy works well.

We are fortunate for this balance and Rockdale is fortunate for the level of employment maintained at Alcoa, compared to that of Point Comfort, which uses natural gas.

Lignite is the difference in efficiency of the two Texas smelters, we understand.

And the balance of light industry, Alcoa employees here, agri-business is Cameron's edge.

Each community and each region must find that mixture of chemistry which keeps things in balance.

US To Relinquish Last Hold Over Philippines

By Lars-Erik Nelson

WASHINGTON Reuter - The United States is preparing to relinquish the last vestiges of its former colonial hold over the Philippines, according to U.S. officials.

In forthcoming negotiations on U. S. military bases in the islands, the United States is expected to:

-- Grant the Philippines clear title to the giant naval base at Subic Bay and Clark Field Air Force Base, while retaining the U. S. military presence at its current strength of 18,000 men.

-- Give the Philippines greater rights to try American servicemen, while restricting the American right to police the areas near the bases.

If the United States in fact makes the concessions now being considered, it will go a long way to satisfying loud Filipino demands for clear sovereignty over their territory and an end to American "extra - territoriality," the exemption of U. S. servicemen from the full force of Philippine law.

The United States is convinced that President Ferdinand Marcos wants a strong U. S. naval and air presence -- currently 8,500 sailors and 9,000 airmen--in the Philippines to protect the sealanes of the region, including those to and from Japan.

Without the U.S. Seventh Fleet at Subic Bay, the Soviet navy could become the strongest force in the western Pacific, a prospect that is believed to frighten China as well as the noncommunist countries in the region.

Philippine leaders are upset at the U.S. failure to save South Vietnam and Cambodia from communism. They now realize they connot count on an automatic U.S. defense commitment in spite of their 1951 mutual defense treaty.

For these reasons President Marcos has complained in recent months that the base agreement must be renegotiated along the lines of those covering U. S. bases in Thailand and Spain.

U.S. officials agree that some anachronisms exist and say they are prepared to meet many of the Philippine demands in negotiations later this year.

The current base agreement dates from March, 1947, and gave the United States control over the bases, rent - free, for 99 years.

In 1966 the two countries agreed that after 1991 the agreement could be terminated upon one year's notice by either side.

Technically the bases are Philippine soil and under Philippine sovereignty. But the United States, which held the Philippine Islands as a colony until 1946, retains greater rights in the republic of the Philippines than it has in other countries with U.S. military bases.

The United States is believed to be willing to stop flying the U. S. flag at the bases, in accordance with the practice at Torrejon and other U. S. bases in Spain.

It is also believed ready to accept a Filipino military commander's assuming control over routine housekeeping at the bases -- though not over military operations.

This, too, is in keeping with the U. S. practice in Spain and Thailand.

The stickiest area is likely to be criminal jurisdiction over U. S. servicemen.

Under the 1947 agreement, U. S. courts martial had the right to try anyone, including Filipinos, who commits crimes on the bases.

Philippine courts had the right to try American servicemen for crimes committed off the bases with no relation to military matters.

The agreement was renegotiated in 1965 to give the Philippines jurisdiction over all non-servicemen and over all crimes committed by off-duty servicemen.,

Masses Influence Chinese System

By Peter Griffiths

TIENTSIN, China Reuter -- A lone policeman, in the blue uniform of the Public Security Bureau, stood at the center of the crowded execution ground and killed the prisoner with a single shot.

This was how Hao Shuang-Lu, deputy - director of the Tientsin people's high court, described the execution here last year of a double murderer.

Hao, flanked by three senior criminal and civil court judges, was giving a rare insight into one of the least known aspects of communits Chinese society -- the judicial system -- in an almost unprecedented two - and - a - half - hour interview.

The deputy - director, dressed in an immaculately -cut grey "Mao suit" stressed that China's most severe punishment, public execution, was used very rarely for unrepentant criminals who had committed "towering crimes" and "aroused great public indignation."

Rapists and murderers were liable to be shot, he said, but the punishment depended far more on the circumstances of the case and the character of the accused.

He declined to say exactly how many people were exechow many people were executed in the city last year, but from among the "small handful" who had faced the death penalty, he cited the example of the double murderer of "vicious motivation."

"The masses both in his district and organization were very indignant, they and his work leaders all agreed he should be sentenced to death," he said.

Hao explained that the man was permitted to appeal to an intermediate court, but his sentence was ratified and, after a mass rally to "criticize and repudiate" him, the murderer was shot by a policeman in one of the city's several public execution spots.

Hao was unable to say how many people witnessed the punishment, but "because the killer had aroused great indignation among the masses, everyone wanted to see his death."

Just as in the verdict of a western jury, the opinion of ordinary people, the masses as they are called here, is one of the most important aspects of the Chinese legal system.

According to the gravity of a case it may be tried by one or several judges who "arrive at the right decision after extracting the opinion of the broad mas opinion of the broad masses."

"The principle is the majority shall prevail -- this guarantees the matter is correctly dealt with," Hao said.

In a very serious case the masses "would be aroused" and opinions sought throughout the city after posters detailing the alleged crime had been displayed in factories, offices and other workplaces.

In these major "counter -revolutionary and criminal cases" it was not just a question of listening to the opinion of the masses (talking to people who knew the accused,) but mobilizing the population and organizing mass rallies to criticize the crime and publicly decide the punishment.

"In this way," Hao said, "we educate and arouse the consciousness of the people, while at the same time deal[illegible]low at class enemies. This system "is in opposition to the old way of dealing with a case behind closed doors," he added.

Hao explained that there were four grades of court in the People's Republic. The supreme people's court of the central government, the high courts of the provincial and municipal governments, the intermediate courts of the districts and regions and the courts of the counties and basic units. All are under the leadership of the communist party and the higher levels direct the work of the lower levels.

Each grade of court has a director and a deputy - director and under them a chief judge, deputy chief judge and other judges, he said.

The courts are divided into criminal and civil dispute types. The directors are appointed by the corresponding levels of the National People's Congress (parliamentary system) and the judges are appointed by the "revolutionary committees of the corresponding levels" -- in effect, town councils or provincial administrations.

Defendants tried at lower levels can appeal once to the next highest court, but from the supreme people's court there is no appeal.

Judges, Hao stressed, must "grasp Marxist - Leninist - Maoist thought, have a firm proletarian stand, have close ties with the masses, be devoted to serving the people and take part in physical collective labor under the supervision of the party and the people."

They are drawn from three sources: old veteran cadres (officials) who have been tempered in revolutionary wars, activists from workers and peasants who have distinguished themselves in revolution and socialist construction, and graduates from legal institutions - though only a few come fromth come from this category," Hao said.

There are a large number of women judges in both civil and criminal courts, he said.

The Lonely Heart

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Robbed At Work

Hired as floor manager in a department store, Phyllis asked where she should leave her new fur coat during working hours. Since there were no more lockers available, she was told to leave the coat in a corridor closet.

A few days later, the coat was stolen from the closet. The store denied any responsibility for the loss, but Phyllis—unconvinced—took the matter to court.

At the hearing, the company said it had never guaranteed its employees against theft. But it seems the closet had neither lock nor guard. Finding a lack of reasonable care, the court said the company would have to make good the loss.

It is common for employees to deposit clothing and other personal belongings in company facilities while at work.

As a rule, the company must provide reasonable safekeeping if — as in Phyllis' case — the employee has been instructed to put the article in a particular place. This creates a "bailment" relationship, with a legal duty imposed on the company as the "bailee."

But the duty is not unlimited. In another case, also involving a stolen coat, the clothes closet was within a locked enclosure to which only employees had access. A court ruled that the company had made a resonable effort to prevent theft, hence could not be held liable.

Of course, some responsibility rests upon the employee as well. A toolmaker who owned his own tools often left them overnight on his work bench. Right above the bench was a broken skylight. One night a thief climbed in through the skylight and decamped with the tools.

Could the company be blamed for the loss because of the broken skylight? A court said no, because the toolmaker himself was aware of the danger. By leaving his tools in such an accessible place, said the judge, he had "assumed the risk" of their being stolen.

Farm Bureau Head Raps Unions' Boycotts

WACO

Boycott of grain shipments to Russia by U. S. maritime, unions is a "self-serving gesture that stabs American farmers in the back," the president of the state's largest farm organization said.

Carrol Chaloupka, head of the 175,000 member Texas Farm Bureau, said the unions are not as concerned about protecting American consumers as they are with forcing exporters to use American ships and sailors.

"Their patriotism stops at the pocketbook," the farm leader said.

The Dalhart cattle and grain producer said the principle of freedom to market is at stake.

"Farmers have won legitimate markets around the world by being competitive," he said. "The maritime unions, on the other hand, have priced themselves out of work. Now they want to use the boycott weapon to capture jobs."

Chaloupka said the Russian grain sales this year have amounted to less than one-tenth of the amount of grain that is available for export.

"U. S. grain exports to Russia over the past four years averaged only 3.2 percent of all U. S. farm exports," he said. "The 1972 sales, which triggered the export dispute, amounted to only 7 percent of total farm exports that year," he added.

"Farmers must export to stay in business," the Farm Bureau leader said. "In the past year, we exported about two-thirds of our wheat and rice, more than a third of our cotton, and about one-fourth of our feed grains. On the national average, the production of one acre in four is sold abroad."

The farm leader said exports are not only essential for farmers, but good for consumers as well.

"Our large farm export business enables us to have volume production and lower per-unit costs," he said. "This results in lower prices to American consumers."

Chaloupka said that farm exports of $21.6 billion in the past year produced an agricultural trade surplus of $12 billion--which enabled the U.S. to have an overall favorable balance of $2.2 billon for the fiscal 1975.

The TFB president said bumper crops this year assure Americans of adequate food supplies at reasonable prices.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture on Aug. 11 estimated that wheat production is up 19 percent over last year, corn production up 26 percent, and feed grains up 25 percent over 1974.

Chaloupka said it is ridiculous to blame grain exports to Russia as the cause of higher food prices.

"We sold very little grain to Russia last year, yet food prices increased by 14.5 percent--and more than three-fourths of that increase took place after the food left the farm," he said.

Attract Birds With Help Of Brochure

People who enjoy having birds around their house will find a new Soil Conservation brochure, "Invite Birds to Your Home," a big help in planning and landscaping for birds.

The brochure, written by Olan W. Dillon Jr., SCS biologist, tells the birdlover how to satisfy habitat needs of nesting and wintering birds with trees, shrubs, and food. It tells how a conservation landscape plan used in the selection of trees and shrubs will beautify your yard and attract the kinds of birds you like.

"A conservation landscape plan will guide you in placing bird-attracting features near a window, patio, or terrace so you can observe the many varieties of birds that accept your invitation," Wayne Mann, SCS district conservationist at Cameron states.

Even birdlovers in dense residential areas can attract birds by providing water for drinking and bathing and living fences and other shrubs for cover. "A single plant, the elderberry, is used by 51 species of birds and will dress your yard nine months out of the year with its white flower clusters and red-black berries," Mann said.

"Invite Birds to Your Home" will tell you the kind of food preferred by different kinds of birds, and how you can provide for them during food-short winter months.

Single copies of "Invite Birds to Your Home," Program Aid 1093, are available free at the SCS Office in the Post Office Building in Cameron. The booklet can also be purchased for 75 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

AYLESBURY, ENGLAND

The Olympic torch is alive and bright and burning with intense competitive spirit in Buckinghamshire. Olympic sportsmen in wheelchairs were an unborn concept 30 years ago. But this summer over 600 disabled people from 34 countries assembled just outside here for the International Stoke Mandeville Games, indicating that the idea is flourishing. Sportsmen, mostly paralyzed from the waist down, take part annually in the competitions--often called "Wheelchair Olympics."

CAIRO

Ayear that began promisingly for Middle East peace prospects is dragging on without any sign of a diplomatic breakthrough and there are fears that the situation could become explosive within a few months. President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who said in January he believed peace was possible for the first time since phe state of Israel was created, has become exasperated at the slow pace of negotiations for a further troop withdrawal.

MONTEVIDEO

Financial incentives for immigrants and a heavy tax on contraceptives are two of the methods being used by the Urguyan government to tackle an unusual problem--a shortage of people. The latest figures for this south American republic show a population growth rate of only 1.2 percent and with a density of only 42 peopoe per square mile, the picture is disturbing.

WEST BERLIN

Since the building of the Berlin Wall 14 years ago, many East Germans have escaped to the west through a security ring of tanks, planes, ships, and bulldozers. But scores have ended up shot to death or imprisoned. Statistics published here show that ainee August 13, 1961, when news of the building of the Berlin Wall flashed around the world, more than 161,000 people have fled the communists republic.

LONDON

There are 100,000 optimists, if the International Monarchists League is right, who think they have the answer to the world's problems--more kings. The League believes that crowned heads in every capital, complete with orb and sceptre but ruling through democratically- elected governments, would end the world's political and spiritual troubles. Founded in 1943, the league believes that the peoples of the world are coming round to their view.

Early Reading To Child Valuable

Early reading to children is valuable--the younger they are, the better, Roberta Dix, family life education specialist, contends.

She pointed out that reading a book and talking with the child may provide that one opportunity during the day when parent and child can be together and feel close.

"Talk about things in the book. This helps him learn about the world around him and about what his parents think and feel--providing a model for his thoughts and feelings," the specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said.

Parents can learn more about the world as seen through a child's eyes. And of course, the child can observe child reactions, too.

Sometimes a tool for getting together is necessary when relating to children--and a book is exactly that.

"New ideas presented may lead to discussion about the number of animals with fur, or what is the difference between fur and hair.

"This is a good time for the child to learn the difference between fantasy and fact. It's much easier to talk about that 'scary' monster when sitting securely in the paren'ts lap."

Nutrient Essential

Special forms of chromium are essential in human nutrition, according to Frances Reasonover, foods and nutrition specialist.

"This mineral is called a trace element because it is found in foods in such small amounts. Scientists think it probably helps the body use insulin," this specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said.

Research shows chromium levels in tissue decline with age. The absorption and metabolism of chromium depend on the form in which the element is present.

"It is estimated that 10-25 percent of the chromium available from food sources is absorbed by the body.

"Recommended amounts of chromium needed dialy are not available, but good food sources are animal proteins, except fish; whole grain products; and brewers yeast," the specialist said.

Couple Takes NY Trip

Sandwich meals are always popular -- especially during the hot, muggy days of August, National Sandwich Month. For a special treat try the Grand Champion Sandwich of the Year, "Hawaiian Farmer," winner of the 1974 National Sandwich Idea Contest.

Prepare the chicken-ham-pineapple mix the night before. You can then quickly assemble and grill this sandwich in seconds. Add chopped pecans, green pepper, celery, green onion and a slice of Mozzarella for the filling. Grilled to a golden brown, you have a winner! Garnish with a pineapple spear, kumquat and a sprig of parsley.

Hawaiian Farmer

- ½ cup crushed pineapple, drained
- ⅓ cup mayonnaise
- 3 tablespoons finely chopped pecans
- 1½ tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 1 teaspoon thinly sliced green onion tops
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Dash pepper
- 6 slices (1 oz. each) Mozzarella cheese

Butter bread. Mix together chicken, ham, celery, pineapple, mayonnaise, pecans, green pepper, onion, salt and pepper. Divide mixture equally on unbuttered side of 6 slices of bread and top each with 1 slice of cheese. Close sandwiches with remaining bread slices, buttered side out. Grill on both sides until cheese starts to melt and sandwich is golden.

Mike White Listed In 'Athletes of the Year'

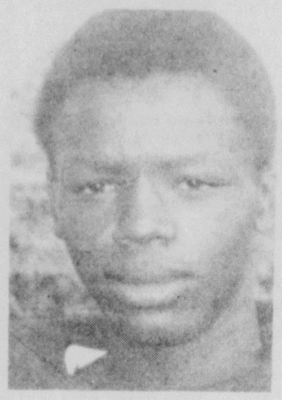
Michael White, senior, has been selected as Prep Track & Field 'Athletes of the Year' for 1975 as announced today by the editors of Coach & Athlete Magazine and Coach Nelson Huffman.

Nominations for Track & Field 'Athletes of the Year' were made earlier this Spring by track and field coaches from across the nation. They were invited to nominate the top athletes from their teams.

Criteria by which these track and field athletes were nominated include athletic ability, including statistics and overall performance, sportsmanship and personal leadership displayed during the current season. To be eligible for the program, the athletes must be members of their high school track and field teams.

Sponsored by Coach & Athlete Magazine, 'Athlete of the Year' is an annual honor roll paying tribute to the more than 900,000 track and field athletes all across the nation. Because track and field is such an individualized sport, many fine athletes' efforts are gone unnoticed by the school and community. The purpose of the program is to encourage these young track and field athletes by recognizing their individual performances that help contribute to team victory.

The athletic achievements of each athlete nominated will be featured in the 1975 edition of Prep Track & Field 'Athletes of the Year', to be published in September. A copy of the Annual will be presented to the National Track & Field Hall of Fame in Charleston, West Virginia and will be kept there on permanent display.



MICHAEL WHITE

Michael speeded through the '74-75 track season setting a 49.5 open quarter and was a member of the mile relay team that placed second in state. In the state meet the team turned in a time of 42.2 which also set a school record. Michael was also a member of the Mile Relay team that placed second in Regional.

Michael will be barking the calls for the Yoemen as one of the quarterbacks and will also play basketball,
In track Michael said, "I'm going to try and get a 47.0 in the open quarter and help the track team win state."

Hunting Licenses Available

AUSTIN

A total of one million combination hunting and fishing, resident hunting, and exempt hunting licences are winging their way to license sales deputies and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department offices across the state.

Mailed August 8, the licenses should be available for sale to sportsmen after August 11.

They will be paid for use on September 1.

P&WD officials say that the 1975-76 licenses remain much the same as last year's, with buck and anterless deer tags and turkey tags printed on waterproof, tear-resistnat paper.

License fees also are unchanged--$8.75 for a comgination hunting and fishing license. $5.25 for resident hunting, and 25¢ for a resident exempt hunting license.

There are the usual spaces for white-winged dove and federal migratory waterfowl stamps. New this year is a $3.25 archery stamp required in addition to the valid hunting license for every archer who hunts wild deer, bear, turkey, and javelina during any open archery season in which longbows and arrows may be used. Like the whitewing and waterfowl stamps, the archery stamp must be signed across its face by the person using the stamp.

Department consignment officials said that no fishing licenses will be mailed out to sales deputies at this time time since the $4.25 fishing licenses are valid for one year from date of purchase and do not necessarily have to be renewed September 1

MILAM AREA PARADE OF SPORTS AND EVENTS

CARL HOMEYER, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Homeyer of Caldwell, shows off the two snakes, that's right, the two snakes he killed Saturday afternoon. According to Carl, the snake on the right was attempting to swallow the other snake, approximately the same size, head first. So what looks like a snake with two tails and no head is only a snake that was trying to swallow up a relative of his. Photo courtesy The Burleson County Citizen Tribune, Caldwell.

MACHINE SHOP OPERATIONS students demonstrate the use of a surface grinder in the Texas State Technical Institute MSO shop. The grinder holds the part in place with a magnet while work is underway. Students in the program gain experience with all of the machines in the shop during the one year program. State Tech Photo.

Machine Shop Students Find Job-Seeking Easy

WACO

Machine shop operation students at Texas State Technical Institute are putting in one year's worth of study and coming out with a $3.50-$7.10 an hour pay scale, comfortable working conditions and good fringe benefits after graduation, according to program instructors.

And while the nation's unemployment situation remains unstable, instructors at State Tech's machine shop program say they have no trouble placing graduates in good paying jobs across the state.

Every candidate for graduation from the program this quarter has been offered a job, according to instructor H. J. Tiner.

Tiner said starting salaries range from $3.50 an hour for students choosing jobs in the Central Texas area to $15,000 a year for those taking jobs with firms in the Houston area.

The one year program is designed to teach students to perform a wide range of tasks in the operation, setting up, and repair of machine shop equipment.

And although the training received by the students is intricate and highly technical, their instruction is considered general enough that they can enter any number of machine shop fields after graduation.

Tiner explained that all machine shop operations are based on similar basic knowledge and skills. He said students may enter general machine shop fields or they may specialize in automotive, oil field, production, or other areas.

Program Chairman W.C. Winters is enthusiastic about the program because he feels there is a demand for trained personnel and because it is a good paying field with plenty of responsibility and satisfaction for those who apply themselves.

"Quite a bit of industry is moving into the south and we are having a terrible time supplying their needs for trained machinists," said Winters. "We need more students for training to fill in the gaps. There is great potential for advancement in the field," he said.

Students in the State Tech program take courses in drafting, machine tool practices, mathematics, welding, and other related subjects so they may receive an overall view of the machine shop operation.

"We teach them as much as we can about the field without taking them into specialization," said Instructor John Bingham.

Bingham and Winters both indicated that the companies doing most of the hiring of machine operators would like to have responsible persons with solid basic knowledge.

The companies can then add their own specific training program to help the new employee adapt to his specific working condition or job.

"The job demand is higher now than it has been in many years," said Tiner. He said part of the reason for the need for additional workers is the increased amount of oil exploration being under taken.
